STUDENTS LEARN TO PREVENT VIOLENCE AND BULLYING WITH TAPROOT THEATRE'S ROAD COMPANY

Touring group celebrates 25th year of touring dynamic social-issues plays to schools

SEATTLE – September 2, 2009 – Fresh on the heels of performing at the New York International Fringe Festival (FringeNYC), Taproot Theatre's Road Company begins a new season of touring educational plays to schools throughout the Pacific Northwest on Friday, September 11, at 1 p.m. when it performs Alexander and the Dragon at Maywood Hills Elementary in Bothell.

Now in its 25th year of touring social-issues plays to schools, the Road Company will be spending this year focused on bullying and violence prevention. The plays are guided by some of the leading curricula on the topics, Committee for Children's "Steps to Respect" and "Second Step" programs. In addition to teaching students how to respond to bullying, the plays also teach students important lessons aimed at preventing harassment before it even starts.

The Road Company's 2009/2010 touring repertoire features the brand new play Super School, which teaches kids about preventing violence and managing their emotions by presenting them with a story about superhero kids who aren't allowed to use their superpowers on the playground. The play premieres at Rose Hill Elementary in Kirkland on Tuesday, September 15, at 2:10 p.m. Returning this school year are Alexander and the Dragon—which teaches elementary school students how to identify and respond to bullying, and their responsibility as a bystander—and New Girl—which shows the serious consequences of cyberbullying.

The Road Company has performed for over one million students since it began touring social-issues plays in 1985.
